Etruscan, 7th-6th century B.C., Bucchero earthenware, large oinochoe with inscribed incuse decoration around the vessel, (height 290mm). Very fine and rare.

$1,000

A vase with a short globular body and continuous curve from mouth to foot, a high neck with a slightly flaring lip and trefoil mouth, a vertical looped handle which may rise above the lip, and a low foot. Through literary sources and artistic representations, it is known that the oinochoe was used for ladling and pouring wine, as well as serving as a grave offering. The famous Bucchero earthenware which is most often associated with the Etruscans, became common between about the 7th and early 5th century B.C. Characteristically, the ware is black, sometimes gray, and often shiny from polishing. The colour was achieved by firing in an atmosphere charged with carbon monoxide rather than oxygen. This is known as a reducing firing, and converts the red of the clay, due to the presence of iron oxide, to the typical bucchero colours.

This disk is one of the original disks from the first random access computer in Australia, the IBM 305 RAMAC at General Motors Holden in Dandenong, Victoria in the 1950s. The RAMAC stood higher than a man and about an armspan wider. It had a number of these double sided disks, constantly rotating, and an equivalent number of double headed arms that moved in and out to read each head face. With research.

The recipient of the above main document was an officer in the Dragoons of Enghien of the Corps of Conde. Louis de Bourbon Conde, Duke of Enghien was a rallying point for the overthrow of the French government. He indicated his desire to work under the British flag and called the French 'his most cruel enemy'. William Wickham had set up spy networks and was advising d'Enghien on the developments of his counter revolution schemes and the two maintained written communications in their efforts to overthrow the French Government. It is understandable that the document issued by William Wickham should afford the recipient protection because officers in the Army of Conde had been threatened with 'nothing better than the rope and the sword' if they entered France.

William Wickham, Spymaster, has had numerous books written about his role in trying to bring down the French revolutionary government and restore the Bourbons to rule France. Wickham was born at Cottingsley, Yorkshire, England on 11 November 1761 into a well-to-do family. After completing his schooling at Harrow and Christ Church he studied for a law degree at Geneva, Switzerland, graduating in 1786. In 1788 he married a Swiss citizen, Eleonora Madeleine Bertrand, whose father was professor of mathematics at the University of Geneva. He then entered the British diplomatic service and because of his familiarity with Switzerland he was sent there in 1794 as assistant to the British Ambassador and one year later was promoted to that position.

As the Ambassador to Switzerland his primary role was that of spymaster and he established a network in Switzerland and France with the object of planning invasions of France by French Royalists or any other foreign powers that might be able to restore the French monarchy of Louis XVIII who was living in exile. To achieve his goals, the British Government endowed Wickham with an enormous amount of money, much of this directed to the revolutionary French General Charles Pichegru whom Wickham was trying to woo over so that all of his troops could be placed into the ranks of Louis Joseph, Prince of Conde who maintained an army on the Rhine. When French spies learned of Wickham's spy network France pressured the Swiss Government to remove him so Wickham resigned and returned to England where he was appointed Under-Secretary of State for the Home Department in 1798. However, he returned to Switzerland in 1799 and resumed his spy network for another three years, this time against Emperor Napoleon I. Pressure was once more placed on the Swiss Government so again Wickham resigned and this time returned to England for good.

In 1802 he was appointed to the Privy Council and named Chief Secretary for Ireland, a post he held until 1804. He also served terms as a Member of Parliament from 1802 to 1807. He died on 22 October 1840. With research.

Winston Spencer Churchill was the Lord Rector of the University of Aberdeen 1914-1918, in 1916 he was Lieutenant Colonel and Commanding Officer of the Royal Scots Fusiliers and in July 1917 he was appointed Minister of Munitions in the British Cabinet. In response to the invitation to speak at the University of Aberdeen, initially Churchill felt that since the war was ongoing it would not be appropriate to present a Rectorial address at this time. In the final paragraph of this letter he writes, 'Let me also thank you for the copy you have sent me of the Memorial of the Members of the University who have fallen gloriously in the field since the beginning of the war. The extraordinary reputation acquired by the Scottish Divisions in an army which was already representative of the flower of our race in all parts of the world was due in no small degree to the astonishing military and personal qualities of the young Scottish gentlemen who hastened from the Universities to command and lead their countrymen in the field. Aberdeen University will rightly cherish their memory as its most precious possession.'

In his last letter, Churchill seems to have changed his stance and indicates the possibility of fulfilling his Rectorial debt to the University and requests an outline of the proposed order of proceedings, numbers expected to attend and other relevant information. On the back of this letter, F.W. Carter has made a series of notes regarding the order of proceedings together with a guideline of possible dates for the Rectorial address. With research.

Queen Elizabeth, The Queen Mother was born Elizabeth Angela Marguerite Bowes-Lyon on 4 August 1900, the youngest daughter of a family of ten children. Her mother was Cecilia Cavendish-Bentinck (later Cecilia Strathmore) and her father was Claude Bowes-Lyon, Lord Glamis. Elizabeth became Lady Elizabeth Bowes-Lyon when her father inherited the Scottish Earldom of Strathmore and Kinghorne in 1904. After twice refusing the proposal of Prince Albert, Duke of York, the second son of King George V and Queen Mary, the strikingly beautiful Elizabeth accepted on the third occasion and in 1923 she married Albert in a ceremony at Westminster Abbey. On her way into the Abbey she laid her bouquet at the Tomb of the Unknown Warrior in tribute to her brother Fergus, an officer in the Black Watch Regiment who was killed in action at the Battle of Loos in 1915. This became a tradition that has been continued by royal brides, albeit now the bouquet is laid after the wedding ceremony rather than before.

Elizabeth had two daughters, Elizabeth (later Queen Elizabeth II) and Margaret (later Princess Margaret). In 1936 her husband became King George VI when his brother Edward VIII abdicated and she became Queen Consort. An older sister was Lady Rose Constance Bowes-Lyon (later Countess Granville). She married the Honourable William Leveson-Gower in 1916 and was godmother to Princess Margaret (younger sister of Queen Elizabeth II) on 3 October 1930.

Lt. R.O. Dent

Rupert Octavius Dent, a former student at Sydney Church of England Grammar School (Shore) and a member of the Senior Cadets, was part of a family business called Dent & Perry, Auctioneers and Commission Agents, which operated from premises at 151 Sussex Street, Sydney and conducted daily hay, chaff and produce sales at Redfern. In December 1916 he qualified at Duntroon for appointment as a 2nd Lieutenant.

During WWI Lt Dent, now 29 years old, was wounded in action with a gun shot wound to the right shoulder while fighting at the Battle of Peronne on the Somme. He was returned to England for treatment at Wandsworth Hospital and recuperation and while there was invited to be a guest at Glamis Castle. This was under a convalescent scheme for recovering Australian and other Dominion soldiers that was in part conducted by Lady Harrowby and her daughter Lady Frances Ryder as well as Celia Macdonald of the Isles. These were the people responsible for Rupert Dent's stay at Glamis Castle which was converted into a convalescent home that Elizabeth helped to run. Rupert was nursed back to health by Elizabeth. He said he was the only officer there at the time and was treated like one of the family.

A few years after Rupert returned to Australia he married. Not long after a baby daughter was born and not surprisingly, she was named Elizabeth. She would later serve in the AAMWS and the AIF in World War II. Rupert also served on home duties as a Captain with HQ Eastern Command. In 1927 Elizabeth and her husband, the Duke and Duchess of York, made a Royal Visit to Australia. An article on the front page of The Daily Guardian, April 8, 1927 headlines, 'Duchess Didn't Forget An Old Pal - 53rd Bn. Officer Who Was Honoured'. 'It all seemed like a dream', said Mr Rupert Dent yesterday, 'when I got a wire asking me to attend Government House with my wife as Her Royal Highness the Duchess of York wanted to see me.' He said he was a bit nervous at first because of her new status however soon they were talking about old times. 'Then she and the wife started talking babies. After that I never got a word in. I feel very proud about it all, and it just goes to show that true friendship stands the test of time, despite rank.'

The following extracts are an indication of the friendship that developed between Rupert Dent and the people from the English nobility that he met while in England during World War I, particularly Elizabeth who would later be the Queen Consort of England, Empress Consort of India and then Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth The Queen Mother.

Undated (c1918) - from Elizabeth Lyon, St James Square - jokingly writes, 'there is no need really for me to write this, except that I want to see if I can write your lengthy address on the envelope neatly.'

1.11.1918 - from Elizabeth Lyon, Glamis Castle - enclosing a ration book and also sadness and annoyance at missing his departure and delight reminiscing about his visit and a hope that 'your heart will soon be quite recovered'.

9.12.1918 - from Elizabeth Bowes Lyon, St James Square - waiting for her brother who is a POW in Germany - hasn't seen him for 2 1/2 years - jovial remarks reminiscing about their meeting and discussions on ear sizes and other traits to assess a persons character. (Elizabeth's brother Michael was reported missing in action on 28 April 1917 and later reported as a POW).

28.10.19 - from Elizabeth Lyon, Glamis Castle - writes, 'I am now a confirmed Liar, you will be pleased to hear and lose no opportunity to tell an untruth.' She also mentions her excitement of driving the Wolseley now instead of the horses and reveals a number of near-accidents. Also states how well she is, 'simply full of beans'. She finishes the letter, 'With thousands of good wishes for Xmas, and the best of luck for 1920.'

Elizabeth's family home, Glamis Castle, Scotland
(Photo courtesy Wikipedia)

5.1.1920 - from Elizabeth Lyon, St Paul's Walden Bury, Welwyn - replying to Rupert's letter re drought in Australia - she recollects on an evening at Glamis with him - states the family has sold one house in London and looking for another and she is miserable and that her mother has started a chicken farm. Also states that she often goes shooting with her brothers. She further writes, 'You say will I go round and round the point if you ever come back to Scotland?' - from what I can recollect it was you who respired to come to the point! Isn't that true? Do you wander round it with everybody you meet? Somehow, I shouldn't think you do, but one never can tell!

29.11.1920 - from Elizabeth Lyon, St Paul's Walden Bury, Welwyn - writes to express her excitement and happiness and the fact that all her family are thrilled to hear of Rupert's engagement and she intends to send a wedding present. 'I wish you both every possible happiness Mr Dent, and all the most perfect things in life - it's all delicious.'

23.12.1926 - from Elizabeth and Albert, Glamis Castle - personal Xmas card with a message which in part reads, 'The Lyon family seems to be flourishing at the moment, and my sister Rosie sends her best wishes. Yours very sincerely, Elizabeth' and the card is signed by Elizabeth and Albert.

29.12.1928 - from 145 Piccadilly (the London house where the future Queen Elizabeth II spent her early years) - letter of best wishes for the year, belatedly because of her being upset due to the King's illness (this was King George V, her father-in-law). Elizabeth expresses her interest in the cricket and relays news of her immediate family. She expresses her desire to return to Australia, 'it's a great country and we love it.'

There are several other letters from Elizabeth's mother Cecilia Strathmore and her sister Rose. Among the things her mother writes about are recollections of Rupert's visit, her daughter's visit to Australia and Rupert's daughter, Elizabeth. Rose Leveson-Gower in her letters in relation to the visit of Albert and Elizabeth to Australia states, 'I shall hear all about you and Mrs Dent when my sister returns. We have so often talked about you. I would like to see your little family and I hope to see the photograph of them when my sister Elizabeth gets it. I think you must all have given her a wonderful time and made her really welcome! I wish she could have taken her baby with her, to show you - She is with my mother at the moment - and is the most adorable smiling baby you ever saw. The other grandparents (King George V and Queen Mary) love her as much as we do - and I hear the King never allows any engagement to interfere with his time with her, when he comes down from 5.20 to six!'
