Captain William Bligh's second breadfruit voyage, engraved shaved down George II halfpenny, inscribed on obverse, 'W Hinde/Otaheite/1793' and on reverse, 'M Smith/Ludgate Hill/London', rim with raised initials, '? W', with decorative markings at edges. Faint lines drawn to assist engraving, otherwise extremely fine and rare.

$1,000

In early August 1791 two newly commissioned ships, HMS Providence and HMS Assistant, departed England on an expedition under Captain William Bligh to collect breadfruit specimens from Tahiti and transport them to the West Indies. Bligh's previous breadfruit voyage was disrupted by the infamous Mutiny on the Bounty incident.

One of the Midshipmen on board the Providence was William Hinde and another was Matthew Flinders.

During the voyage the ships arrived at Adventure Bay, Tasmania on 9 February 1792 where Christopher Smith and James Wiles, the voyage botanists, collected plants and specimens as well as sowing seeds and planting trees on Bruny Island and Penguin Island. The ships then sailed to New Zealand and thence on to Tahiti (Otaheite) where they arrived on 9 April 1792. They remained there for three months gathering on board about 2,000 plants, many of which were bread-fruit. On 19 July 1792 the expedition set sail for the West Indies stopping at various islands on the way including St Vincent and St Helena before arriving at Port Royal, Jamaica on 5 February 1793. A large number of plants did not survive the voyage but overall the expedition was a success with the surviving plant specimens being planted at Jamaica, St Vincent and St Helena.

In the journal of Lt George Tobin on board the Providence he records in May of 1793, Jamaica (p302), 'a very promising young gentleman by the name of Hind (sic) fell a martyr to the yellow fever in a few days.'

Nothing is known about M.Smith of Ludgate Hill. Is this person perhaps related to the ship's botanist, Christopher Smith?

Vintage Masonic neck jewel, (c1790s), handcrafted in ivory (or bone) roughly in the shape of a four leaf clover-like cross (approx 92x93mm), obverse, seven pointed star with a letter in each point representing the seven churches of revelation, namely E(phesus), S(myrna), P(erganios), T(hyatira), S(ardis), P(hiladelphia), L(aodicea), inside the star is a circle with crossed swords and in each angle is a letter, H, G, A, L, at the sides of the star a laurel spray, at the bottom a moon, sun and stars, and at the top, a crown with the monarch's initials, 'GR', at each side of the crown a pierced hole for suspension, at each arm end of the cross a series of cryptographic letters, 'QSFQBSF UP NFFU UIZ HPE' (PREPARE TO MEET THY GOD), reverse, another series of cryptographic letters in the centre and around each arm end of the cross, 'B DIJME PG HPE LJOH PG LJOHT MPSE PG MPSET' (A CHILD OF GOD KING OF KINGS LORD OF LORDS), at the lower half of the centre circle is what looks like a scroll with seven tabs ready to be unfurled. Some chipping at edges, otherwise fine and rare.

As was sometimes done on Masonic medals and messages, in keeping with the organisation's secrecy, the text on the medal is written as a cryptograph. In this case the message is based on a sliding scale where the alphabet moves one letter to the right, for example GOD encrypts as HPE i.e. G(H)O(P)D(E).

The meaning of the letters HGLA is unknown. Possibly the order should be read as HAGL and the meaning is Hiram Abiff Grand Lodge. Hiram Abiff was the principal architect of King Solomon's temple and he was killed in the temple by three ruffians when he refused to disclose Master Masons' secret passwords. This story forms a part of a candidates initiation into the Third Degree of Freemasonry or induction as a Master Mason.

Vendor states this item is of Australian origin c1790s. There were no Masonic lodges formed in Australia until 1820 so this item was possibly made by a British soldier, sailor or even a convict who had arrived in the new colony and was a member of a lodge in England, Scotland or Ireland.

It is of interest to note that the images of a moon, sun and stars was also a feature of the Charlotte Medal made by a convict on the First Fleet when it arrived at Botany Bay in 1788.

Alfred Ronalds (1802-1860) born in London, immigrated to Australia arriving in Williamstown, Victoria, February 1849 with his six children. He proceeded to Geelong and within a short time set up his business and placed advertisements in the 'Geelong Advertiser', his first entry being 'Alfred Ronalds, Draughtsman, Engraver and Copper Plate Printer'. He brought with him from England the equipment he needed for this business venture.

On 11 November 1850 the vessel 'Lysander' brought news to the residents of Port Phillip that they had been granted separation from New South Wales. The Separation Act had been passed by British Parliament on 1 August and received Royal Assent on 5 August. From the 1 July 1851 the Port Phillip District was to become the separate Colony of Victoria. Ronalds was inspired by this news so he decided to produce a medal as an everlasting memento of the birth of this new Colony. It was purely a private commercial venture without official sponsorship. The simple but effective drop hammer process must have been used to strike the medals as there was no coining press in Australia, much less in Geelong. The number struck is not known, however the great rarity of this piece would indicate it would have been minimal. This was Alfred Ronalds' first and only medal production.

The first medal struck in Australasia and extremely rare with the only other recorded sale in the last seventy one years being the Jewell/Chapman example.

William Vial & Co had a coach building company that operated out of premises at 259, 261 Castlereagh Street, Sydney with a factory at Paddington, Sydney, NSW. Their specialised work covered such aspects of coach building as bodymaking, blacksmithing, wheelwrighting, trimming and painting to the highest and yet affordable standards. They were endorsed by appointment to H.R.H. the Duke of Edinburgh, Sir Hercules Robinson, K.C.M.G., and the previous Governors of New South Wales. Mr Vial obtained some notoriety for himself and no doubt his business during the visit to Sydney of the Duke of Edinburgh, Prince Alfred. On 12 March 1868 an attempt was made on the Prince's life while he was attending a luncheon at Clontarf but it was quickly thwarted by Mr Vial who according to a newspaper report, 'sprang upon the dastardly assailant, pinioning his arms to his side.'

Later, a meeting of coachmakers was assembled and to show their admiration for his bravery agreed that a testimonial should be presented to Mr Vial as an expression of their approval of the bravery he displayed and that all the coachmakers in the colony be requested to subscribe thereto. On 24 March 1868 Mr Vial was also presented with a gold medal of thanks from the Sydney Volunteer Fire Brigade, of which Mr Vial was a member, for his noble conduct in saving from death H.R.H. Prince Alfred.

Herbert Claude Vindin, born 22 July 1863 at Maitland the son of Alfred Vindin and Mary Ann Lloyd. He died at Chatswood on 25 July 1919. The Vindin family was prominent in the Maitland area with various family members owning companies, being in senior positions on many important committees and one was the local magistrate.

Sauchi House was erected in Church Street, West Maitland by Dr John Fraser in the 1830s. In 1864 he conducted a boys' school at the property until his retirement in 1883 and then the NSW Education Department leased the property from him to open Maitland Boys' High School. This continued until the old Sauchi House building was demolished in 1966 to make way for more modern facilities.

There were two Patterson Medals awarded each year, the annual gift of a former pupil of Sauchi House.

Professor T.P. Anderson Stuart MD, President of Prince Alfred Hospital was involved in events during the Sydney Royal Visit as he was a member of the Executive Committee to celebrate the Consummation of the Commonwealth by the Opening of the First Federal Parliament to be held in the Royal Agricultural Grounds in May 1901. Also as Chairman of Directors of Prince Alfred Hospital he welcomed the Duke at the hospital on the morning of the 31st May before delivering a long address outlining the hospital's history since it opened in 1883. The Duke then laid the foundation stone of the new Queen Victoria Memorial Pavilion. Chiselled on the corner stone of the new pavilion was the following inscription, 'This memorial stone of these Victoria memorial pavilions was placed by H.R.H. the Duke of Cornwall and York on May 31, 1901. Anderson Stuart, M.D., LL.D, chairman of directors.'

Also on 31 May 1901, the Citizen's Royal Reception Committee organised a state concert at Sydney Town Hall. The concert featured the Amateur Orchestral Society playing the overture to 'Tannhauser' while the Liedertafel and Philharmonic Societies chose popular works with the vocalists being Antoinette Trebelli-Delores from London and Madame Belle Cole and Philip Newbury both from America and as well, Mr Joseph Massey gave an organ recital before arrival of the Royal guests.

Sir Thomas Peter Anderson Stuart (1856-1920), professor of physiology and medical administrator, was born on 20 June 1856 at Dumfries, Scotland and was educated at Dumfries Academy until aged 14. Although he was apprenticed to a pharmacist and had passed his preliminary examinations at 16, he was prevented by regulations from sitting for his finals until he reached the age of 21. In 1874 after passing the preliminary examinations for entry into medicine at the University of Edinburgh he spent a year in Wolfenbuttel, Germany, improving his French and German. He returned to university in late 1875 and during his course of studies he was awarded ten medals in various subjects, and topped his final year in 1880 with first-class honours and a gold medal. He then spent a year at Strassburg, studying biochemistry and pharmacology, studying the physiological properties of the salts of nickel and cobalt, work that he later wrote up as his doctoral thesis which won him another gold medal. Becoming chief demonstrator in 1881 to William Rutherford, professor of physiology at Edinburgh, in mid-1882 he accepted the chair of anatomy and physiology at the University of Sydney.

Professor Anderson Stuart and his wife embarked on the ship Parramatta, arriving in Sydney in March 1883. He began work in what is now called the Old Geology Building and it was through his agitation and perseverance that the university senate approached the government for funds for a better building and in June 1884 the university agreed to build a permanent medical school with plans drawn up by James Barnet, the government architect. These were approved in November and construction began and although greater than originally planned, in April 1889 it was substantially complete, but interior fitting out continued until 1892. Today, this structure forming the south range of the old medical school, as it now stands, is a masterpiece of Victorian Gothic Revival.

The years 1883-1912 were ones of extraordinary activity for Anderson Stuart, Dean of Medicine and Fellow of the Senate at the university (1883-1920) and the undergraduate enrolment in medicine rose and staff also increased substantially. Anderson Stuart, known to the undergraduates as 'Andy', was also an illuminating lecturer who went to great pains in preparing his blackboard diagrams and founded the Sydney University Medical Society to assist students. He even managed some modest research activity of his own on the structure of the eye and on the function of the epiglottis and larynx.

In 1901 he was appointed honorary secretary, soon chairman, of (Royal) Prince Alfred Hospital. From this time Anderson Stuart's attention was focused on the development of the hospital and he devoted himself to a massive building programme. In addition to his university posts, from 1893 to 1896 he was Medical Advisor to the government, Emigration Officer for Port Jackson and President of the Board of Health and after his presidency he remained a member of the board until his death. He was also at various times president of such community organisations as the Highland Society, the Royal and (Royal) Zoological Societies of New South Wales, the Civil Ambulance and Transport Brigade, the British Seaman's Guild and the local branch of the British Immigration League of Australia and a founding executive member of the State Division of the British Red Cross Society (1914) and Deputy Grand Master of United Grand Lodge of New South Wales. He belonged to the Union and Australian Clubs and was even a patron of the Double Bay Pastime Cricket Club.

At university he was primarily responsible for the establishment of the School of Dentistry in 1901 and in 1905 became the first president of the United Dental Hospital of Sydney, having overcome the opposition of American-trained dentists. Anderson Stuart was also to the fore in establishing the Department of Veterinary Science in 1909.

Anderson Stuart's wife, from whom he was separated, died from an overdose of morphia at their home in 1886. Some years later, on 18 September 1894, he married 19-year-old Dorothy Primrose, a granddaughter of Bouviere Primrose who was an uncle of Lord Rosebery and the couple resided at Lincludin, a fine house in Fairfax Road, Double Bay.

He received honorary doctorates from the universities of Edinburgh (LL.D., 1900) and Durham (D.Sc., 1912), and was knighted in 1914.

Although Sir Thomas destroyed his personal papers, on his death-bed he dictated lengthy biographical memoirs. Anderson Stuart died at his Double Bay home on 29 February 1920 and is buried in the Presbyterian section of South Head Cemetery. His wife and their four sons, two of whom became medical practitioners, survived him.

The Victoria and Albert pavilions at R.P.A.H. and the old medical school building at the university are appropriate monuments to his greatness. Marble busts of Anderson Stuart by James White are held by R.P.A.H. and by the University of Sydney which also holds a fine portrait by John Longstaff. His name is also honoured by various details on the medical school building which was formally named after him in January 1960 with his family arms surmounting the eastern portal; his crest is on a gable on the north-west range and rendered in stained glass beside the south portal. He is also represented as a stone crow, sculptured by Tomaso Sani, high above the eastern portal, commemorating his student nickname of 'Coracoid' (from the Latin word corax, meaning a crow), earned because of his prominent nose and somewhat priggish personality.

Murphy was a key player in a parliamentary crisis for the government in May 1904. When the Third session of Parliament opened, an amendment on an Address-in-reply was defeated by only one vote, the government being saved by the vote of newly elected W.S. Murphy who had rushed overland by horse and coach to Cairns and then by ship to Brisbane to cast his vote after the government had carried out a prolonged 'stonewalling' debate awaiting for his arrival. G Essex Evans wrote a poem about the incident and compared Murphy to the Russian General Kuropatkin who was providing relief to besieged troops during the Russo-Japanese War which was in full force at the time. Henceforth he was known as 'Kuropatkin' Murphy.

The Sunlight Cricket Association was affiliated to the Balmain & District Cricket Association. COMOX was a manufacturer of oxy acetylene equipment.

The J.T. Murray referred to above is possibly a player who in 1924 in Adelaide, South Australia, was the most popular player of the day. A member of the East Torrens team and a Sheffield Shield player, he was an outstanding batsman and a useful bowler. He learnt his cricket while at St Peter's College where he was a spectacular hitter. He was just making his name in cricket when WWI intervened and he enlisted, serving as a Gunner with the artillery. While in the AIF he was invited to play with the Australian Imperial Forces team led by H.L.Collins. Murray also represented South Australia when they played England in 1925. He played in NSW on various occasions as a representative player and in charity matches.
